

Kent Kirschmann

The water industry is something that will always be important to the entire world as it plays a crucial role in just about everybody's everyday lives. Water companies provide citizens with safe and clean drinking water that we use for cooking, cleaning, and drinking. Without the hardworking individuals who work every day to provide us with a reliable water supply, our lives would be drastically different. Access to clean and safe water is crucial to one's health. These industries ensure that the water that we are consuming and using for other needs is free of any harmful bacteria and contaminants.

Water undergoes rigorous testing and cleaning processes to ensure its quality as I have had the experience to view first hand. If not for the water industry we would be at risk of diseases and health complications every time we go and drink water because it has not been safely decontaminated of all living bacteria. The water industry expands to literally everywhere it is vital for farmers during the summer to produce food production and to feed their animals. Without a suitable water supply for farmers, it would mean that they could go without crops because they were in need of water and they couldn't get any. The clean water they receive also contributes to the food's freshness and security.

The water industry greatly affects the economy as it creates thousands of jobs and stimulates economic growth. Each year it employs various professional individuals with all sorts of backgrounds and access to jobs. It not only affects just those companies but also supports the construction, tourism, manufacturing, and food industries each year. With the gift of clean water, every single job would be positively affected day by day. Some people may overpass just the effects it has on disaster management and response teams. When things like droughts and floods happen these industries provide emergency relief supplies to ensure the safety of others. It also leads to the rehabilitation and recovery of restoring infrastructure.

To sum up the importance of the water industry its workers and companies should be treated with respect and should not be overlooked because it is dire for our health and everyday lives. As it impacts you in more ways than you can imagine. You can think about how much you rely on clean water just when you wake up in the morning, brushing your teeth, showering, drinking clean water, and cooking. The water industry is something that will never go away and will only advance as the world around it does as well.